Did You Know...

The Hillsboro Lighthouse will be open to the public? The Hillsboro Lighthouse is usually open just four times a year through the joint effort of the U.S. Coast Guard and Hillsboro Lighthouse Preservation Society. Your 2006 tour opportunity to climb the tower and enjoy the grounds will be February 4, May 6, August 19 and November 11. During tours, iced tea and other beverages are available adjacent to the lighthouse tower, courtesy of the Hillsboro Club. The chairs and tent are also provided by the Hillsboro Club.

The lighthouse structure is an octagonal, pyramidal, iron skeleton tower with a central stair cylinder designed by the Lighthouse Engineers in Charleston, S.C. prior to 1905. It was fabricated by Russell Wheel & Foundry of Detroit, assembled there, disassembled, and shipped by steamer to South Florida. The builder of the structures here in 1906-07 was J. H. Gardiner of New Orleans. The tower height from the ground to the top of lantern, is 142 feet. The total number of steps to the lantern room is 175. The light was first lit in March, 1907. It has the original second order bivalve (clamshell) Fresnel lens by Barbier, Benard, & Turenne, Paris (1904). Note the new entry walkway with railing to new steel steps outside the struts and legs. In 2004 the ground was lowered to the original level, 18 inches below the struts. The tower area is now covered with gravel. A curved slate-veneered wall constructed on the ocean side of the tower is to prevent the beach sand from drifting into the tower's legs and decaying more of the struts again. A memorial plaque, "Beaver", is for a Coast Guard mascot dog that faithfully served for 15 years at this lighthouse station from 1958 to 1973.

The Hillsboro Lighthouse Preservation Society was founded in 1997 for the purpose of preserving the historic Hillsboro Light in its original form for the safety, enjoyment and education of the public. For more information call 954-942-2102 or log on to www.HillsboroLighthouse.org

The City of Pompano Beach will celebrate its centennial anniversary in 2008?

In 1908, when most of South Florida was little removed from wilderness, the residents of the small settlement named Pompano voted to incorporate. Originally in Dade County, the following year it became the southernmost municipality in Palm Beach when that county was established. Seven years later it became one of three incorporated towns in the newly-created Broward County.

Pompano was first and foremost a farming community; its rich soil and hardy pioneers insuring economic growth and fame for its beans and peppers. A business district grew alongside the Florida East Coast tracks. During the harvest, its streets were clogged with farmers and brokers, intent on selling, packing and shipping the winter vegetables to northern markets.

Following the Second World War, tourism became an important economic force in the area, and in 1947 Pompano merged with the beach area to become Pompano Beach.

Pompano Beach's history is a fascinating story of people who came to an often-times inhospitable region and carved out a city. It is the story of farmers and bankers, fishermen and housewives, Olympic medalists and television stars, teachers and tourists. From this diversity has become today's Pompano Beach.

The birthday party is coming and a committee has been formed to plan and stage the city's centennial celebration. Every resident of Pompano Beach is invited to participate in this landmark occasion. Historical photographs and stories are needed to complete the history. Volunteers are needed to make the 100th Anniversary Centennial Celebration a success. Whatever your interests, there is a place for you on Pompano Beach's Centennial Celebration Committee.

To volunteer or for further information, contact the Pompano Beach Historical Society at 954 872-3015 or century@pompanohistory.com.

A Pictorial View of the Holidays

The City of Pompano Beach wishes to thank all of its citizens for taking part in the holiday festivities that took place throughout the city. Even though Hurricane Wilma forced us to cancel certain events, it did not stop us from ending the year on a good note. After intense cleanup, repair and preparation we were able to enjoy the Thanksgiving Senior Luncheon, the Yuletide on Atlantic Celebration and the Pompano Beach Boat Parade. Follow along as we look at the recent holiday events through pictures.

Have You Seen the New Hillsboro Inlet Park?

Many of you remember the Hillsboro Inlet Park, which was a passive park that ran along the east side of the Hillsboro Inlet Bridge. The park offered a beautiful view of the lighthouse, but the accommodations were very sparse, with only a few benches along the water. It didn't offer much to families, yet was a great location for local fishermen angling for a catch.

Recently, after a year and a half of remarkable work, the park has been transformed from a quiet location into a fun, family-friendly destination. Thanks to multiple grants and funding sources, the park was redesigned to offer picnic pavillions, barbeque grills, a fishing pier, children's playground and public restrooms. If you are looking for a fun afternoon catching fish, grilling food and letting the kids play, or just a relaxing day under a palm tree watching the boats go by, this is the park for you.

Another great point of interest in the park is the historical anchor which sits in the middle of the park as its centerpiece. It is surmised that the anchor was from the Gil Blas, a cargo ship that was driven ashore during a hurricane in 1835. How the anchor got from there to the park is quite a story.

Vone Research, a non-profit organization in Pompano Beach, saw a pair of anchors at a local business and after some research realized that they were possibly from the Gil Blas. They found out that the anchors in question were brought up in the 1950's and sold as salvage to a local business owner. The original owner had the anchors in front of his home, then later relocated them to the front of his business. Vone Research contacted the owner of the anchors and requested that they be donated and put on permanent display. The next step in the process was to meet with the city to work out where the anchors would be placed and how to best use the city's resources in this project. The Hillsboro Inlet Park was chosen as a perfect location for one of the anchors. After working out the basics, the most important part of the equation was to restore the anchor. Vone Research, "Touching History" is a community-based project that brings Broward County's maritime history into the classrooms and allows students "hands-on" experience in the identification, restoration and preservation of marine-based artifacts. After gaining support from the Broward County School District, the Pompano Beach High School was chosen to undertake the three year restoration process of the anchor. Donations from many local businesses helped Vone Research and the school complete the task and bring a bit of history to the surface.

The Hurricane Season- Are You Really Ready?

Weather forecasters and emergency management officials often find themselves in the dilemma of trying to get local residents to sufficiently appreciate the terrible power of hurricanes while, at the same time, not over playing the message and causing alarm. Not an easy task. Some people spend the entire hurricane season from June to November suffering great stress and anxiety while other folks just don't seem to take anything seriously.

These days most people you meet will initially tell you that they are quite ready for the hurricane season. After all, they'll explain, they went through Frances and Jeanne last year. Unfortunately, deep down, most people would probably admit that they really haven't put that much effort into preparation. And our hurricane experience last year was hardly that of the "direct hit" variety. Common sense tells us that the more thoroughly we plan and prepare for anything, the better the result we can expect to see. This applies as much to surviving a hurricane as it does to building a house, planning a career, or laying out a vacation itinerary.

Okay, so where can we start? For openers, go outside this weekend and actually put those shutters up just as if a storm was coming. Better to find all of those little glitches now rather than later when the stress of a storm is bearing down. And you will find glitches, hardware will be missing, holes will be gone or filled in, you won't have the right tools handy, or you simply won't remember how things fit together. By installing the shutters now you will clear up any problems and, as a bonus, you'll learn exactly how long it will take you to do the job.

Buy a new generator? Now is the time to open that instruction manual and learn everything there is to know about your new toy. The generator needs to be filled with gasoline and oil. You need to read the safety section closely so that you or your family members won't become injured. The generator should be completely set up and run prior to any approaching hurricane. It is critical to know how much your generator can handle and exactly how to use it. Consult an electrician if you plan to tie the generator into your house circuitry. A device called a transfer switch is an absolute must in that case. If you're simply going to use extension cords, make sure you have the proper size, length, and receptacles. It should be obvious that spare gas cans and oil need to be stored safely nearby. Generators will operate for varying lengths of time depending on their size and fuel capacity. It is important to know how often you will need to be refueling.

Going to go to a shelter? Most shelters are specifically-designated schools selected for their construction and safety. They may or may not be all that comfortable. It is a good idea to find out the shelter that you are expected to use and drive by the facility for a good look. You may change your mind about this option. If not, you'll at least know how to get to the shelter and the amount of time needed for the trip.

Think you're all set for lengthy power outages? Consider having an "electricity assessment day." This is a day you pick where you make note and write down every time you use something that needs electricity. The assessment period goes from the time you get up in the morning until bedtime. Most people are amazed at the number of things that depend on electricity to operate. This little exercise may greatly expand your list of hurricane necessities, but, in the end, will leave you much better prepared for the hurricane experience.

If you work, are you clear what your boss wants when a hurricane approaches? It is surprising just how many workers have never even had this discussion with their employer. It is vital to know what preparation efforts will be made, what extended hours will be worked (if any), when workers can go home to secure their properties, and when workers will go back to work in the aftermath. Many workers will find out that some employers don't even have a plan and that creating one is beneficial to everyone.

While the items discussed hardly constitute a complete list, employing them will go a long way to allowing you to state, with some earnest conviction, "I am ready for the hurricane season."

Clean Up!

The City of Pompano Beach Animal Control Division receives one messy complaint more than any other. We receive at least one complaint every day related to...dog pooh. The typical attitude of the complaining party is anger with a twist. They are not only angry at the dog owners who do not clean up after their dogs, but they also blame Animal Control personally, as if we are the ones walking the dog! Here is a list of the most frequent dogged offenses:

*by David Aycock
Animal Control Officer*

- Early riser: The justification is while everyone is asleep, no one will notice.
- Jogger: Most dogs try to stop or even slow down to defecate during the jog, but that requires the owner to slow down therefore allowing people to notice the offense, so they drag the dog until he learns to go on the run. Once he is trained to go on the run, owners justify, it didn't really happen.
- Swale walkers: This is the owner that believes that if the dog goes in the city swale, it is okay because it is not technically a home owner's property.
- Park and beach walker: This is one of my favorites! Mom calls Animal Control furious because her child rolled in pooh and we weren't there to catch the culprit.
- Midnight walker: This one either walks without a leash or uses a very long retractable leash after dark when no one can see the violation.

We live in a highly dense community. What you do with your pet will certainly have an affect on your neighbor. Although it is something everyone should know, we do have pooper scooper laws in place to insure owners pick up after their pets.

The current ordinance 90.07 Animal Committing a Nuisance (6) pertains to cleaning up on public property or upon premises not owned or controlled by the owner unless promptly removed. This section has a $250 first offense and $500 second and subsequent offenses penalty. Subsection (7) of the same ordinance pertains to urination whereas damage would occur and or on the living area not owned or controlled by the animal owner to include: porches, patios, balconies, and or furnishings contained thereon. Subsection (B) requires that when walking your pet you must carry a reasonable method of removal of defecation and this subsection carries a $100 first offense penalty. 90.19 Cleaning of enclosure requires the owner to clean their own yard or pen and does not allow for more fecal matter to accumulate than what can reasonably be produced in a 24-hour period.

The advent of the retractable dog leash has not helped the problem. Many times an owner is standing in one place such as the sidewalk and their dog is 20 feet away due to the retractable leash. The owner does not retrieve the feces due to the distance - which might be by your front door. Dogs as well as cats tend to relieve themselves in heavily traveled areas because they are marking their territory. Front doors make especially good markers. There are many other motives that prevent some owners from cleaning up, but I think the most common is that it is messy and not in their front yard.

So how do we get the stubborn pet owner to have a sense of community pride? By example. Carry your bags so everyone can see them when you are walking your dog. If you see someone without a bag, offer them one of yours, politely. If all else fails, contact Animal Control and we can patrol your neighborhood during the times you specify. Some people have even resorted to taking video or still pictures. A picture and a sworn statement has actually been enough evidence to issue a citation.

Proper disposal, once it is bagged, is the trash receptacle. It is not against the law and is much better than trying to wash it down. Many residents are responsible pet owners and do clean up after their pets. Hopefully, those who do not will read this article and think twice about bagging this messy situation.

Become CERT-ified!

The 2004 hurricane season brought one storm after another to the State of Florida. The photos below show Hurricane Francis pounding the Pompano Fishing Pier and Hurricane Jeanne approaching the Florida coast. How can you be better prepared for emergencies such as hurricanes?

The City of Pompano Beach Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) Program is an educational program for local citizens that prepare you to help yourself, family, and neighborhood in the event of a disaster. Pompano Beach Fire-Rescue is hosting an accelerated CERT class where you can become a CERT member in only 4 weeks!

Twenty-five Pompano Beach Citizens completed five weeks of disaster preparation training with Pompano Beach Fire-Rescue. Graduation for the CERT Training Class was held on July 9, 2005. PARKS AND RECREATION DEPARTMENT

What's inside...

As many of you have noticed, Pompano Community Park is currently under renovation. Phase one of the project started in July and includes many items such as renovation of the basketball court, jogging trail resurfacing, placement of new equipment along the jogging trail, construction of two new parking areas, landscaping along with many improvements to the tennis courts and Tennis Center. We plan to have phase one completed by January 2006 and will begin with phase two of the Community Park Project shortly after phase one is completed. Phase two will consist of ballfield and playground improvements. The park renovation project will be gradually completed over a three to four year period. We encourage residents to continue enjoying Community Park and look forward to when the park renovation project is completed.

The Parks and Recreation Department has many projects taking place in the near future including renovations at Mitchell/Moore Park scheduled to begin in December of 2005. Hunters Manor Park is currently in the design phase. We are also very excited about the completion of Avondale Park and Weaver Community Park which are scheduled to be open in late August or early September and contain such amenities as playgrounds, restrooms, pavilions, jogging trails, basketball courts and much more. Construction of the new Community Park Pool will begin in October of 2005. Due to grant funding deadlines, the new Mitchell/Moore Pool will begin as soon as the Community Park Pool is finished.
